“Vermonters at Their Best”

The flood of 1927, much like the flood of 2011, destroyed many of the bridges and roads in Vermont, so transport to the devastated area for President Coolidge was extremely difficult. Despite this, Coolidge reached his beloved home state only weeks after the flood. What he saw he described as “Vermont at her worst, but Vermonters at their best.”

In the weeks following the flooding after Tropical Storm Irene hit our area on August 29, we have seen acts of heroism large and small. People in the close-knit community that the Thompson Center serves have responded with actions: pulling on boots, donating food and time and clothing, and wielding shovels and rakes. But we have responded in another crucial way: by listening. We have listened to each other’s stories for weeks and they keep on coming.

Telling a story and having it heard is validating. It can be healing and cathartic, also. Each personal experience is different, but combined they form a fascinating picture of an event that we all witnessed together.

As members of our Memoir Club read their work after two weeks off due to Irene and Labor Day, it wasn’t surprising that several of us wrote about the hurricane and flooding. Our accounts were very different in style and substance, but they all rang true.

Following are a few excerpts from our writings. Thank you to Sherry Belisle, Jane Soule, and John Leavitt.

“The river had become a living being, in control of everything in its path with a power beyond our comprehension. The roar of the water sounded as though it were coming from a dragon’s mouth. Breathing gas tanks bobbed along the high waves. Hundreds of these huge pill-like structures were released from their beds, a prescription no pharmacist would ever fill. The river loved the taste of gas and oil. It drank both but left some to pollute the pristine, clear water that had flowed between its Woodstock banks for thousands of years.” - Sherry Belisle

“Vermont has been protected from the worst weather hazards since our Green Mountains create a topography that seems to have kept these tragedies from touching us. It was difficult to imagine that Irene would bring more than a good rain to Vermont. It was a hurricane of water that made Vermont vulnerable this time. I have never seen the rain come down as it did. Gone is any smugness that we might have felt untouchable. The pounding rain drenched the already saturated state and rivers rose to unimaginable heights taking homes and trees tumbling downstream to block bridges and culverts as well as sharp curves in the meandering brooks...” - Jane Soule

“...Then we went down into East Barnard where the culvert was full of water and the water was backed up into Sabra’s field and Faith’s field. It looked like a huge lake and the Community Hall was being flooded with water...I went up to Campbell House to pump out the cellar. The power was off now so I took my generator to run the sump pump. Down into the cellar where there was 8 inches of water...I ended up pumping it out five different times. I figured I pumped out about two feet of water in all...It was a hurricane of water in all. Then the telephone went dead so we had no phone and no power.” - John Leavitt.

Perhaps combining our voices will create a collective community story that makes some kind of sense. If you or someone you know (any age!) has written an account of the flood or your experiences over the past few weeks, please contact Cindy Parker at the Thompson Center about contributing to our community memoir about Irene.

Remember When...There Was a Flood?

Thursday, October 20, 1:00 PM
Join Kathy Wendling and a staff facilitator to share memories of the floods of 1927, 1973, and 2011. Bring pictures or written materials to share.
I’d like to give a special thank you to our wonderful Thompson Center staff and volunteers who pulled together in amazing ways in order to keep meals going out and our building open and welcoming immediately following the flooding. We’ve also never been so thankful to hear the reassuring buzz from our beloved generator! Thank you again to those who gave the generator years ago. It made all the difference!

We’re now approaching the beginning of our fiscal year (October 1st) and are looking forward to our Annual Meeting on October 19th. It gives us a unique chance to share more information about how we’re doing with reaching this goal. Our operating expenses are approximately $450,000 each year, and the annual appeal gifts are a critical portion of the annual income we work year-round to achieve. If you haven’t received an annual appeal letter and would like to be added to our mailing list, please let us know.

As always, please be in touch with me at any time with questions or suggestions. I can be reached at (802) 457-3277 or via email at: tsc-execdirector@comcast.net. I hope you’ll plan to attend.

Our annual appeal has begun for 2011-2012. We feel it is critical to reach our goal of $80,000 during this annual appeal, and I’ll keep you posted on how we’re doing with reaching this goal. Book Club

Wednesday, October 12, 1 PM

Our next book is is Someone Knows My Name, by Lawrence Hill. It’s the fictional story of a black woman, kidnapped from Africa as a child. She is enslaved in South Carolina but escapes during the Revolutionary War. In Manhattan, she is employed by the British to record the names of blacks who have earned their freedom to go to Nova Scotia. Eventually she returns to her homeland where she becomes a storyteller entrusted with her village’s ancestral tales. At the end of her life, she moves to London where, to the British Parliament, she bears witness to the injustices of slavery. Although the book is historical fiction, it is rich in authentic detail. Ami Nata Diallo is a heroine you will never forget.
